YouTube Turns 10 Years Old

Although it seems like it's been around forever, YouTube is now ten years old. The domain www.youtube.com was registered on Valentine's Day in 2005. Chad Hurley, along with fellow PayPal colleagues Jawed Karim and Steven Chen, created the domain after they had become frustrated that they couldn't find footage of recent news events, such as the Janet Jackson Super Bowl Halftime wardrobe malfunction and the tsunami in the Indian Ocean.

The first video was uploaded on April 23 and growth was rapid. Within the first six months, 65,000 videos per day were reported to be uploaded to the site, fetching 100 million views per day. Later that year, YouTube received investment from Sequoia Capital, and the following year was acquired by Google for $1.65 billion.

With more than 1 billion users, YouTube has become the most important video-sharing website. Currently 300 hours of new videos are uploaded to the site every minute, three times more than one year earlier and around three quarters of the material comes from outside the USA. The site has 800 million unique users a month. It is estimated that in 2007 YouTube consumed as much bandwidth as the entire Internet in 2000. Alexa (Actionable Analytics for the Web) ranks YouTube as the third most visited website on the Internet, behind Google and Facebook.

Music dominates the all-time Top 10 chart. The #1 spot is still occupied by "Gangnam Style", the rapper Psy's infectious music video that was released in 2012 and has since generated more than two billion official views, about double the total views garnered by the second-most viewed video in YouTube history, Justin Bieber's "Baby" from 2010. LMFAO ("Party Rock Anthem"), Katy Perry ("Dark Horse" and "Roar"), Eminem ("Love the Way You Lie"), Jennifer Lopez ("On the Floor") and Shakira (Waka Waka (This Time for Africa)) also land on the Top 10, as does the second Psy's video ("Gentleman"). The only non-music video to crack the list? A little classic called "Charlie bit my finger – again!". That clip has been played more than 800 million times.
